

Tristan Santiago

May 13, 2018

CS290_400

Project Proposal

I will be designing a professional website for myself with this project. My goal, in addition to practicing my HTML/CSS and JavaScript skills, will be to create a functional website that will ideally make me a stronger candidate for prospective job opportunities in the near future. The website itself will serve as an opportunity for me to demonstrate my own HTML/CSS and JavaScript skills, while also serving as an ongoing project that will allow me to continue to practice these skills and think critically about ways to make improvement after this project has been completed and submitted. Personally, I am interested to see how this project evolves not only over the next few weeks, but also over the next several months, as I begin to learn new skills and concepts to implement in the future.

DESIGN

Though I will largely focus on stability and functionality, I will do my best to apply a bit of style to the website that will ideally make it a little more aesthetically pleasing to visitors. I will briefly describe my initial thoughts on the website's design, though I suspect this will change a number of times while constructing the site itself.

- I. Homepage
 - a. The homepage will contain a welcome message and a brief self-introduction, closely resembling what one might find at the top of a resume.
- II. About (first subpage)
 - a. The about page will contain a slightly longer biography, highlighting some of my personal and professional interests, and provide some detail about completed projects, projects I'm currently working on, and lastly projects I hope to work on in the near future.
- III. Resume (second subpage)
 - a. This subpage will simply contain the latest version of my resume, making it available for visitors to view and possibly download at their convenience.
- IV. Contact (third subpage)
 - a. This subpage will provide visitors with a way to contact me directly from the website, as well as reference other ways to contact me (such as through social media).
- V. Additional features (fourth subpage and beyond)
 - a. Though I have not yet spent a lot of time considering what additional features I may include in this project, I suspect that that will change throughout the development process. Those ideas will fall into this category and will be added after everything else has been completed.